JUST A LITTLE GOSSIP.

A man went into a local saloon one day last week and asked the bartender for "a bucket of beer with red rags in it." A schooner of ale with red pepper in it was served.

Our French contemporary L'Etoile which brightly twinkles every afternoon, came out in a souvenir number Saturday, which was not only a credit editorially, reportorially and typographically, but a sample of enterprise which convinces us that the daily is up-to-date. The recent proceedings of the model municipal government with pictures of all the members was a special and remarkable feature.

It is said that in one place where a license commission was turned into a police commission, and said body exercised the functions of both, the commissioners exercised a remarkable plan to learn the true character of saloons and how they were conducted. It was customary previous to that time to have the city marshal accompany the license commissioners on the rounds of inspection of places for which licenses had been applied. But the new commissioners dispensed with the city marshal's services and called in the patrolmen of both the day and night reliefs and questioned them quite minutely about the amount of disorder incident to said place.

And it proved quite a revelation to the commissioners, for it was shown that the city marshal had at previous times dating back for a number of years conveniently changed patrolmen who in fulfilling their duty had been too rigorous with the saloon keepers.

Many people wonder by what process undertakers bore a hole in the glass covering of a casket. The writer happened in to an undertaker's warerooms the other day just as the attendant had finished boring a hole. To the writer he said: "Many people wonder how this is done. The process is simple. We have what is called a diamond file sharpened to a keen edge. By boring slowly and steadily with this file, we are able to make a hole without ever cracking the glass."

There was a meeting of the republican councilmen or at least nearly all of them in Councilman Hunton's office on Central street last evening at which time the Boy Detective of the local press made an address on the latest developments in the political situation. MODIST WORTH

Had No Peer in His Profession

HE HAD ACHIEVED WORLD WIDE REPUTE

By the Great Work of His Paris Salons.

PARIS, March 12.—Worth, the famous dressmaker, died yesterday of congestion of the lungs.

CHARLES FREDERICK WORTH

Charles Frederick Worth, king of dressmakers, was an Englishman by birth, but his fame was made in Paris during the second empire. He was born at Bourne, Lincolnshire, and his parents apprenticed him to a printer. Worth disliked the business exceedingly, and seven months after entering it abandoned the printing office and went to London.

He secured employment in a dry-goods store, where he remained six years. While there he conceived the idea of becoming a dressmaker, and thought of Paris as the most eligible place in which to follow out his inclination. He had learned the French language before going to Paris, where, when he was about 22 years old, he found employment.

Empress Eugenie Gave Him His Start.

After a few years he and a partner began business for themselves. The partnership continued until 1870. In that year Worth became the sole name of the establishment. Worth had received medals for designs at the exhibition of London and Paris before he was so fortunate as to make dresses for the Empress Eugenie. This was the beginning of an illustrious reputation which was ever after maintained.

The world-renowned establishment of Worth is in the Rue de la Paix. There are about 10 salons, some fitted with closed wardrobes of carved oak and some with shelves; those with the wardrobes are for the made-up "modeles," those with shelves are for unmade goods.

Each room has its own particular garments and materials; for example, one for velvets, another for cloth, then silks, plain, dark and light, etc., all in their appropriate places. The apartments at the back are fitted up and lighted for the trying on and arrangement of the different costumes and confections. One has special electric light for the evening toilets.

Another specialty is the room appropriated to the fitting upon which are displayed a selection of the newest models; and one most interesting feature, viz., the stylish ladies, both tall, slim and stout, with costumes suiting each style, who walk about, and in this manner are able to show at a glance what the effect of each toilet will be when worn by the purchaser. About 200 gowns and 150 cloaks were turned out weekly by Worth.

FIRE AND ITS TERRORS.

Everybody Should Be Prepared—How a Scalded Child was Cured.

(From the Boston Herald.)

Every person who works around a fire can save themselves much suffering by keeping at hand a good remedy for scalds and burns. When such accidents happen the chances are that something is applied that had better been left off. A person will often apply cold water to a burn and suffer tenfold in consequence. Then there are many remedies recommended for burns and scalds that only give temporary relief; they do not prevent the inflammation, blistering and soreness that follow a burn, and which often possibly be recommended than Perry Davis' Pain-Killer. This good old specific, with its record of half a century, has no equal, and it is doubtful if it ever will have. True, when first applied it will bring the tears to your eyes for a moment, but after that the fire leaves, the pain stops, and the trouble is over.

A case that came under the notice of Mr. Charles Carroll, editor and publisher of the Rhode Island Pendulum, at East Greenwich, R. I., is well worth citing. He says: "I witnessed one application of Pain-Killer in our family which was accompanied with wonderful results. A little child was playing near the kitchen stove, on top of which was a kettle of boiling hot fat. The cook accidentally upset the kettle and the contents were poured down the low neck of the little one's dress. It was a time of emergency. Whatever was done had to be done quickly.

"Mother always believed in Pain-Killer, and without a moment's hesitation she poured a bottleful of it down the baby's neck. It was heroic treatment, to be sure, but it proved wise, for the child's life was saved and what was most wonderful, there was not a scar left as a reminder of the terrible accident. Pain-Killer certainly kills pain."

FORGERS COME TO GRIEF.

Voullaire and an Accomplice Caught In the Act at Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., March 12.—Alphonse Voullaire and a female companion were arrested in this city yesterday for passing worthless checks. Voullaire is well known to the police of the country.

Theodore Hibert, a saloon keeper, acting under the advice of Chief of Police Hopper, cashed a bogus check in his store for Voullaire yesterday morning. Both Voullaire and the woman were at once arrested. On the latter were found three bogus checks drawn on a Baltimore bank, and two small bottles containing a colorless fluid, which the police believe to be knockout drops. The police found in Voullaire's apartments a large check book, a check-stamping apparatus, and a number of incriminating letters.

A FRIENDLY HAND

Extended by Argentine Republic to Brazil.

THE DIFFERENCES OF TWO CENTURIES OVERCOME

By the Just Ruling of President Cleveland.

(Copyrighted, 1895.)

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 12.—The Diario Official publishes the following telegram of Dr. Jose Uriburi, president of the Argentine Republic, in reply to that of President Moraes:

"The friendly manifestations of the Brazilian people toward the Argentine people, although not favored by a favorable decision of the eminent judge (President Cleveland), to whom was entrusted the final sentence in this question, which has been for two centuries occupying attention, are sincerely happy at seeing disappear the only motive of possible disagreement with their former allies, relations which it is our constant desire to strengthen by bands of mutual cordiality and common interest. Your excellency will please accept the expression of my sentiments of regard and highest consideration."

Bonds Firmly Strengthened.

The committee charged with the manifestation to Baron de Rio Branco has received the following telegram in reply:

"WASHINGTON — Senzadello, Correa — I thank you in my behalf and that of my companions for the honorable message sent us. I am convinced that the sentence of the illustrious American, who, with such painstaking and conscientious labor, exercised the functions of an arbitrator, animated by the same sentiment of friendship to both nations, will have been also received with entire satisfaction throughout the Argentine Republic, and that this happy and honorable event will cause the bonds of friendship which have united us with our allies of Caseros and Paraguay to be still more firmly strengthened, as we so much desire."
